Question 4B (15 marks)Read the text below.

Charlie was an only child. His parents spoilt him a lot. They gave him whatever he wanted and he had so many toys that he did not bother to take care of them. His toys were scattered all over his room. When he was bored with a toy, he would just throw it away.

One day, he told his father that he was tired of playing with his toys. He wanted something different. So, his father bought him a horse. Charlie was very excited. He learned how to ride and spent his time going about on his horse.

However, he treated his horse just as badly as he did all his toys. The horse soon started looking sad and sick. It did not run as quickly as before. Charlie was truly worried as he did not want to exchange his horse for any other toy.

One day, in a nearby field, he saw a girl riding a horse which looked very happy and healthy. Charlie wondered how she managed to keep her horse well. Charlie asked the girl to teach him how to look after his horse.

The first thing which she told him was to treat his horse with love and affection and never to use a whip to hit it. Charlie was surprised because he had been using the whip regularly.

The next thing was to take care of it by feeding it well, giving it water to drink and brushing it carefully. Charlie started putting into practice what the girl had told him. It was difficult at first because it required a lot of effort on his part. The horse recovered quickly and was soon as lively and happy as before.

Charlie was grateful to the girl. They started riding together every day and became very close friends.
